Tournament Format

In response to the addition of automatic qualification in the NCAA men's and women's tennis championships in 2006-07, the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Corporation tennis coaches made several significant changes to their championship format in 2004.

Similar to what occurred for other Corporation team sports in 2000, crossover championship play between the first and second place Freedom and Commonwealth representatives ended. Each conference now has a team championship based on the top four finishers in regular season conference play (#4 vs. #1 and #3 vs. #2, with the winners of the first round matches playing for the team championship). In the future, the champion of this tournament will be out AQ for the NCAA tennis championship.

Besides a team championship component to the NCAA tournament, individual entries are included. The move from an individual Corporation tournament where players chose between singles and doubles to a flighted tournament for all nine positions (#1—#6 singles and #1—#3 doubles) better highlights superior players for NCAA consideration. This format is better fits the Division III philosophy for participation. More players are involved in a flighted tournament than they were in a single elimination tournament in singles or doubles.
